Wilson Pickett is one of the "10" crowd in the world of pop. Every new Pickett release is eagerly anticipated by his name fans throughout the world. His rising style is emulated by a score of pop and rhythm & blues singers, his hit songs have become classics for today's young pop artists. His fan clubs now extend from the United States to England, Europe and the Far East. His records are jammed by soul followers ranging from teen-beaters to the young adult pop-oriented intelligentsia.

The genuine feeling that Wilson Pickett injects into his songs has been responsible for the sensational string of hits he has racked up over the past few years, hits that include such memorable discs as "The Midnight Hour," "Mama's Best," "Land of 1000 Dances" and "Mustang Sally." (The latter song, plus a strong collection of pop-r&b standards and soul blues material, are included in this golden new album.) Wilson's soulful style is derived from his rich gospel singing and rhythm & blues background. It's this earthy, down-home style (and perhaps a little thing called "attitude") that has earned him the rock name of "The Wicked Pickett."

On "The Wicked Pickett," another tremendous personal imagination and moves with the firmness of a trained dancer as he punches out the words to his songs. The three areas of music that Wilson represents—gospel, r&b, and pop—fuse together in his singing through that intangible "cotton soul," which Wilson possesses to a most unique degree. Enthusiasm, personality, and soul have brought Wilson worldwide fame. They will continue to keep him a member of the "10" crowd in the pop world for many years to come. BILLY ROSENBERG
